The brief was to create a home that preserved visual balance, while creating space, light and symmetry. This executive home looks even more stunning when lit up at night. Incorporating an existing structure, Brutal Art Construction raised the roof height, tunnelled the existing home to create garaging, a home theatre and storage, and clean new interior space behind the conventional facade. The polished hardwood floors are constructed from blackbutt. Stacking aluminum-framed doors open to the balcony. The clean lines around the home were achieved through dressing the architraves and skirts all around the home. Bright and natural colours, including glossy white kitchen benchtops, drawers and cupboards, cream walls and polished floorboards, maintain an expansive yet warm feel throughout the home.
